THE EDITOR'S CHAIR.

The gold-bug papers are trying to make it appear that the people are opposed to free coinage of silver and that they voted against Campbell on account of the silver plank in his platform. The fact is the silver question was not an issue and was not discussed in the campaign as it should have. No doubt Campbell lost votes through gold-bug influence

by reason of that plank, but he would have gained double the number he lost, if he had boldly advocated free coinage before the people on the stump.

THE RESULT.

Democratic Governors in New

York, Mass., and Iowa; Republicans Elect McKinley.

New York. Flower (Dem.) was elected by about 50,000. The Legislative Assembly (Rep.) majority

nearly 20,000.

Mass. Russell, (Dem.) 8,000.

New Jersey. Democrats have a majority in both branches of the legislature.

Virginia. This state voted for house, state and senate. The Democrats carried the day overwhelmingly. It was a victory for the Democrats.

Arkansas. This state voted for house, state and senate.

The Tabernacle Pulpit

Again the panorama passes before the cavern of Patmos, and John the exile sees a mounted Christ on a snow white charger leading forth the cavalry of heaven, the long line of white chargers galloping through the scene, the clattering of hoofs, the clinking of bridles bits and the clash of spears, all the earth conquered and all heaven in Doxology. And we halt again to rest from the spectacle. Again the panorama passes before the cavern of Patmos, and John the exile sees great thrones lifted, thrones of martyrs, thrones of apostles, thrones of prophets, thrones of patriarchs, and a throne higher than all on which Jesus sits, and ponderous books are opened, their leaves turned over, revealing the names of all that have ever lived, the good and the bad, the renowned and the humble, the mighty and the weak, and at the turn of every leaf the universe is in rapture or fright, and the earth gives way, and the heavens tremble.

Blessed be our ears that we have heard of an ever present God, and that through Jesus Christ he comes into our hearts and our homes, and with more than fatherly and motherly interest and affection he is with us in all our struggles and bereavements and vicissitudes. Rhodes needs something higher than the Colossus, and the day will come when the Christ, whom Paul was serving when he sailed into this harbor of Rhodes, shall take possession of that island.

IMPORTANCE OF ISLANDS. As we move on up through this archipelago I am reminded of what an important part the islands have taken in the history of the world. They are necessary to the balance of the planet. The two hemispheres must have them.

As you put down upon the scale the heavy pound weights, and then the small ounces, and no one thinks of despising the small weights, so the contents are the pounds and the islands are the ounces. A continent is only a larger island, and an island only a smaller continent. Something of what part the islands have taken in the world's history you will see when I remind you that the island of Samos produced Solon, and that the island of Chios produced Homer, and the island of Samos produced Pythagoras, and the island of Coos produced Hippocrates.

But there is one island that I longed to see more than any other. I can afford to miss the princes among the islands, but I must see the king of the archipelago. The one I longed to see is not so many miles in circumference as Cyprus or Crete or Paros or Naxos or Scio or Mytilene, but I had rather in this sail through the Grecian archipelago see that than all the others, for more of the glories of heaven landed there than on all the islands and continents since the world stood. As we come toward it I feel my pulses quicken.

"John, was in the island that is called Patmos."

It is a pile of rocks twenty-eight miles in circumference. A few cypresses and inferior olives pump a living out of the earth, and one palm tree spreads its foliage. But the barrenness and gloom and loneliness of the island made it a prison for the banished evangelist. Domitian could not stand his ministry, and one day, under armed guard, that minister of the Gospel stepped from a tossing boat to these dismal rocks and walked up to the dismal cavern which was to be his home, and the place where should pass before him all the conflicts of coming time and all the ruptures of a coming eternity.

Is it not remarkable that nearly all the great revelations of music and poetry and religion have been made to man in banishment—Homer and Milton banished into blindness; Beethoven banished into deafness; Dante writing his "Divina Commedia" during the nineteen years of banishment from his native land; Victor Hugo writing his "Les Misérables" exiled from home and country on the island of Guernsey, and the brightest visions of the future have been given to those who by sickness or sorrow were exiled from the outer world into rooms of suffering. Only those who have been impeded by very hard surroundings have had great revelations made to them.

So Patmos, wild, chill and bleak and tempestuous, was the best island in all the archipelago, the best place in all the earth for divine revelations. Before a panorama can be successfully seen, the room in which you sit must be darkened, and in the presence of John was to pass such a panorama as no man ever before saw or ever will see in this world, and hence the gloom of his surroundings was a help rather than a hindrance.

All the surroundings of the place affected St. John's imagery when he speaks of heaven. St. John, hungry from enforced abstinence, or having no food except that at which his appetite revolved, thinks of heaven; and as the furnished man is apt to dream of bountiful tables covered with luxuries, so St. John thinks of the inhabitants of heaven. "They shall hunger no more." Scarcity of fresh water on Patmos and the hot tongue of St. John's thirst leads him to admire heaven as he says, "They shall thirst no more." St. John hears the waves of the sea wildly dashing against the rocks, and each wave has a voice, and all the waves together make a chorus, and they remind him of the multitudinous anthems of heaven, and he says, "They are like the voice of many waters."

One day, as he looked off upon the sea, the waters were very smooth, as it is today while we sail them in the Minerva, and they were like glass, and the sunlight seemed to set them on fire, and there was a mingling of white light and intense flame, and as St. John looked out from his cavern home upon that brilliant sea, he thought of the splendors of heaven and describes them "As a sea of glass mingled with fire." Yes, seated in the dark cavern of Patmos, though homesick and hungry and loaded with Domitian's anathemas, St. John was the most fortunate man on earth because of the panorama that passed before the mouth of that cavern.

LET US VIEW THE PANORAMA.

Turn down all the lights that we may better see it. The panorama passes, and lo! the conquering Christ, robed, girded, armed, the flash of golden candlesticks and seven stars in his right hand, candlesticks and stars meaning light held up and light scattered. And there passes a throne and Christ on it, and the seals broken, and the woes sounded, and a dragon slain, and seven last plagues swoop, and woes are poured out, and the vision vanishes. And we halt a moment to rest from the exciting spectacle.

Again the panorama moves on before the cavern of Patmos, and John the exile sees a great city rising out of all abominations—Babylon, towering, palaced, templed, fountained, foliated, sculptured, hanging gardens, suddenly going crash! crash! and the pipers cease to pipe, and the trumpets cease to trumpet, and the dust and the smoke and the horror fill the caverns, while from above and beneath are voices announced, "Babylon is fallen, is fallen!" And we halt again to rest from the spectacle.
